

ACKNOWLEDGE UP FRONT THAT THE PCS ARE GOING TO WIN, AND NEVER SWEAT IT. THEN USE THE DICE TO ESCALATE, ESCALATE, ESCALATE. WE ALL KNOW THE PCS ARE GOING TO WIN. WHAT WILL IT COST THEM?

LUMPLEY

A DESIGNER KNOWS THAT HE HAS ACHIEVED PERFECTION NOT WHEN THERE IS NOTHING LEFT TO ADD, BUT WHEN THERE IS NOTHING LEFT TO TAKE AWAY.

ANTOINE DE SAINT-EXUPÉRY

THE INTEGRITY OF ITS SPAN WAS RIGOROUS AS THE MODERN PROGRAM ITSELF, YET AROUND THIS HAD GROWN ANOTHER REALITY, INTENT ON ITS OWN AGENDA. THIS HAD OCCURRED PIECEMEAL, TO NO SET PLAN, EMPLOYING EVERY IMAGINABLE TECHNIQUE AND MATERIAL. THE RESULT WAS SOMETHING AMORPHOUS, STARTLINGLY ORGANIC.

WILLIAM GIBSON, VIRTUAL LIGHT

CROMLYN GAMES

CYBER PERIPHERALS

PUBLISHER OF THIS BOOK

Copyright © 2018 Cromlyn Games

PUBLISHED BY PUBLISHER OF THIS BOOK

TUFTE-LATEX.GITHUB.IO/TUFTE-LATEX/

Licensed under the Apache License, Version 2.0 (the “License”); you may not use this file except in compliance with the License. You may obtain a copy of the License at <http://www.apache.org/licenses/LICENSE-2.0>. Unless required by applicable law or agreed to in writing, software distributed under the License is distributed on an “AS IS” BASIS, WITHOUT WARRANTIES OR CONDITIONS OF ANY KIND, either express or implied. See the License for the specific language governing permissions and limitations under the License.

First printing, January 2018

Contents

Basic Moves	21
Preparing to play	29
Playbooks	31
Cyberware	55
Assets	57
Advancement	59
The matrix	61
Running Cyber_Peripherals	63
the first session	65
Designer Notes	67
Bibliography	69

List of Figures

List of Tables

*Dedicated to those who appreciate \LaTeX and the work of Edward R. Tufte and Donald E. Knuth.
And to the horde of goblins who died
defending them.*

Playing in Cyber_Peripherals

Cyber_Peripherals is a stand alone game of stories for 3-5 players in a cyberpunk world. Most of you will play the roles of neon slumdogs and one of you will be the Master of Ceremonies (MC for short). The game is a conversation between you all, with the MC to facilitate and fill in what is needed for the story. From time to time, the story will reach a point where the outcome is interesting and uncertain. The dice help out here, and add a sense of tension as their fall changes the fictional world and sparks new directions for the conversation. The story will center around a community of individuals and how they live under the various pressures of a Zaibatsu dominated future. You're unlikely to be pulling off Shadowrun type missions, and if you are, you'll want to take a look at the rpg The Sprawl, which is built for that. This rpg is designed to be compatible, but is more interested in the kind of stories that came later in the cyberpunk genre, those of Greg Egan or Tricia Sullivan or Nalo Hopkinson.

In fine cyberpunk tradition, this book is pirated hackjob. Bits of the Sprawl, Urban Shadows and Apocalypse World have been recycled, paired up and duct taped together with Simple World. The playbooks are mostly original, but precious little else is. A favour is owed to the designers, testers and editors of those books.

Why play Cyber_Peripherals?

Play if you want to play to find out what happens in a neon and chrome cyberpunk future. Play if you want to create a story about everyday folk living on the peripheries. Play if you are playing the Sprawl, and want to follow your Killer character home to see how they do the groceries. Play if you want to struggle against the Man, in a world where 'Man' needs citation marks. Play if you want to win sometimes, lose sometimes, and explore the future twenty minutes from now.

How to use this book

This first chapter will introduce the basic concepts of the game, what characters, stats and the other core mechanics are and how to use them. The next will introduce the Basic Moves, moves that all player characters have that set the tone and pace of the game. Then we'll look at game setup, and following that the individual playbooks, so that each player has a unique archetype to play to, play against and create headaches for everyone else. Don't say "Zero does", say "I do".

If you're an experienced player or MC of Powered By the Apocalypse type games, you probably want to check the MC agenda, principles and moves. The player Basic Moves are on page 21. The Playbooks are here 31: If you have crossed over from a Sprawl Game, you will also want to look at install Sprawl drivers?

Stats

Every character has six stats which represent their raw ability in different spheres of the world. As you look at them, you'll see areas where they might overlap. This is fine, just use what the triggered move demands for your character in that situation.

- COOL to remain calm and focused in stressful situations
- EDGE to draw on your street smarts, street rep or dark side
- MEAT use your physical talents without cyberware to get stuff done
- MIND to think your way around a problem with sheer intelligence, lateral thinking or obscure knowledge
- STYLE to handle a situation with charisma, presence or raw sex appeal
- SYNTH to interface seamlessly with technology

Each of these stats varies between -1 and +2 to indicate how well that specific character acts in that sphere. The higher the rating, the more competent you are. These Stats are the same as in the Sprawl. If you get TAKE +1 FORWARD than you can also add that +1 onto the total for the next roll you make.

Core mechanics

Roll Dice

You'll see the instruction to ROLL+STAT quite a lot in the rules. This simply means roll two six sided dice and add them and the stat together. As a general rule getting ten or above (10+) is a strong hit and getting seven to nine inclusive (7-9) is a weak hit. You get what you want, but there's complications. Getting below six (6-) is a miss. You might not get what you want, or if you do, it's only because it sets the MC up to tell a new bit of the story. That is then called the MC making a move.

Making moves

Moves are specific set pieces in the genre fiction. They typically come with a trigger, a roll for someone to make, and a range of results. Nearly always, they are powerful things you can do as a player (or MC) to shape the fiction. You can definitely try and guide the story towards a situation where a move you want to use triggers, but the move must trigger in the fiction before dice hit the table. Some moves are called Basic Moves and can be used by any player character. Others are specific to playbooks.

An example: Jokero the Trader has just caught Greendog raiding his bins for unsold, out of date food.

Jokero: I've had three break-ins the last week and I've had it with these punks. I grab my SchorchTorch Hygieniator 3000, stand above the bin pit and aim down. "Oi, nedstain, where's the pallet of steak you stole last week? Better answer quick matey, or you'll be served up very well done to the meat wagon."

MC: "Are you bluffing?"

Jokero: "Nah. A trader lives by his word."

MC: "Right we're playing hardball then, roll +edge."

"Play Hardball" is the move for threats backed up by the threat of real violence. If Jokero was bluffing, it would trigger a different move like "Fast Talk" instead. Poor Greendog.

Experience

Experience measures how entangled you are in the world, how much you've achieved and how it has left its mark on your character. Every time you MARK XP it goes on your character sheet playbook. To stay compatible with the sprawl, each time you mark ten experience you'll choose a new advance for your character. The advances you can choose are listed in your character's playbook and include options like raising a stat or choosing a move from a different playbook.

MC moves

The MC makes moves based on triggers too. The triggers are a little different though: The MC makes a move when a player misses their move, when the fiction demands it and when the players are waiting for something to happen (around a table, that's tends to be when the conversation stalls and everyone looks at the MC). A full list of the MC moves can be found in moves. When the MC makes their move they may make it a soft move, where the players get a chance to avoid bad consequences, or a hard move, where the consequences happen as they say it. The MC move might appear to unrelated to what you failed at. It does not matter, as long as it moves the fiction along and is interesting. The MC is also obligated to make hard moves as the fiction demands. Stand in the open firing a pistol at Corp Sec snipers, the fiction demands you get shot, maybe in the leg if the MC is feeling merciful or just interested who'll come and rescue your stupid arse. That said, the MC is not out to kill you.¹ They are out to make the garish, chrome and neon and dirt encrusted world of Cyber_Peripherals feel real. They are out to challenge your characters so we can all see how they respond and develop. They are here to find out what happens.

¹ in this case, hopefully a previous move would have been "tell the consequences and ask", where they remind you that standing in the open taking potshots at professional snipers is something your character would know is dumb. But maybe you need to buy getaway time for someone else. Man, they'll owe you a big favor.

Agenda and Principles

The Agenda are the things the MC must do. They're a damn good guide for players too.

- Play to find out what happens
- Make the world dirty, shiny, high-tech and unequal
- Don't waste your players time.
- Entangle the characters with the world.

If you are in doubt, do something that fulfills the agenda. The easiest way to do this consistently is the more detailed rules the MC must follow called the Principles:

- ├ chrome everything, then make it dirty
- ├ make everything corporate. make everything reused.
- ├ start with the vertical
- ├ ask questions about the everyday.
- ├ address the characters, not the players
- ├ ask loaded questions and incorporate the answers
- ├ name everyone, make them rational
- ├ treat your NPCs like disposable assets
- └ build shifting, unstable communities

Tags

A tag is a word which describes a significant fictional characteristic of something in the game. It's a quick, semi-formal shorthand for something interesting about an object, person, gang, vehicle ect. They can be positive or negative, or might be a mixed bag. For example, a '+flashy' jacket might a good bribe for a tasteless gambler, but the MC might call up the '+flashy' jacket as the reason you were noticed after failing a roll. A weapon with '+hair-trigger' might be justification for getting that first shot off, but might also be an MC follow-up move if you drop your gun.

The purpose of tags is to condense the description of things to the parts that might matter for the story. They also provide inspiration and invite different moves for players and the MC. An '+ex-military' gang is going to behave differently to a '+scavengers' gang, and an '+ex-military +scavengers' gang has told you a lot about the world in only two words. The suggestiveness of combinations of tags makes them especially useful to help improvisation at the table.

Some tags have explicit impacts on the game mechanics as well as fiction (for example +ap weapons ignore armour) but most impact on the fiction.

Favours

Favours are introduced from Urban Shadows. In the shadowy slums and favelas and encrusted fungal brackets on the great arcologies, Cred is useful, important even. Inside the community, FAVOURS are just as important. Favours between characters tie them together, often for more than just paying the favour off. Being owed favours lets you punch a little above your weight. Owing favours is a sign that others trust you to pay them back. Unless you don't, in which case remember, the street finds its own uses for things.

Gangs

Gangs are introduced from Apocalypse World. The Sprawl is all about hard-bitten individuals who chase the mission, creds and their directives. Cyber_Peripherals is all about communities, and sometimes bits of those communities work together. The gangs section of the rulebook has explicit mechanics for handling gang on gang conflict easily, but mostly gangs are about characters, the stories that unfold and the additional fictional positioning. You can literally have characters in three places at once. Handy.

Fictional Positioning

Some moves, tags or equipment don't have numerical effects in the game mechanics. Instead they give the characters fictional positioning, the option to undertake certain kinds of action. You can't give somebody a lift if you haven't got a vehicle. You can't shoot somebody unless you have a gun. You can't fix somebody's roof unless you have the materials, tools and a way to get up there safely. But maybe, with the right combination of equipment, cyberwear and help from someone giving you a boost, you can. No move triggered, no dice needed.

Sometimes fictional positioning is used to make the ground less steady. The trader accepted a '+blackmarket' shipment. That means the MC has a justification, almost a responsibility, to find out what that means for the story, by unleashing a couple of cybered-up custom agents. Someone's rolled a miss, and has a '+disloyal' gang. Well, One-Eyed Kratus has been complaining in fiction for a while now, perhaps it's time to challenge for gang leadership?

You don't win a game like this, but if a player sets up their character to run a gang with the '+disloyal' tag, they might as well be saying "I want a story where a brutal leadership challenge happens.". Players and MCs both, giving players what they are asking for is a good thing for the game. Player's - make your interests as explicit as you want. MCs- use them, incorporate them, even aim at them. Make sure you've all got the same expectations going in.

The crowd was getting thicker and my head hurt. Little old ladies with glowwires in their dreadlocks elbowed past, chuntering like old lawnmowers to each other. The smell of paella was in the air from the huge turning pans at the front and the sticky smell of energy drinks rose from the mud between stalls. Behind the little old ladies walked Knighthood, a street poet and occasional councilor and lawyer. Her meaty hands slapped her sides as she walked, unable to stride because of the crowd. She pointed at me and thumbed me a nod. Her dollar coin was weak but she earned and spent cred like any pillar of the community. An image followed the nod. Someone she was looking for. I sighed and sent a promise, spinning the image-match-up on the spare slots of my specs. No one I knew but with the market crowds within eye line I might get lucky. The headache was pounding and I needed to move somewhere quieter, away from the grannies' dirty laughter. I moved past the next stall and ducked into an alley.

No stalls faced onto here, it was a ratrun created by a natural drainline and no stall-holder wanting to stand in the mud if they could help it. The stall on the corner of the alley had an old tarp lining the sides. The long dead company logo glittered where brushing bags hadn't worn it away. As I rounded the corner the stallholder, a wizened old lady with flyaway hair thumbed a pamphlet on the importance of beehives and Christ at me. I waved it off but smiled her a cred for at least keeping it off paper. The stall next to her was touting the value of Singing to Stones, the latest fad to have hit the Neopags. I moved on down Headspace Alley, waving incense out of my way when my specs flashed red, telling me they had found a match.

I got out of the main flow of the crowd. I dialed up Knighthood's image to take a proper look. An awkward girl, hair cut short, probably a bit too young for an apprenticeship but probably chafing to get out of school. Specs had flagged someone browsing the stalls some way up with the same height and haircut. Watching her, something felt off, her reactions a little bit too quick. I approached the girl. She was watching a demonstration of Tinkerbots. Little robot collections of arms and wobbly legs, they were good at sorting materials or poking around and soldering repairs on reclaimed junk. The maker had his six active bots pulling apart old radios and neatly laying out each tiny piece in its own place on the white table. I got quite close before she threw her hood up and started walking away, pushing into the crowd. I stepped faster and she hunched up, pushing hard enough against people the routing system started to open up pathways for her, trying to guess where she might need to go in such a hurry. I crossed to the other side of the space and walked too, aiming to overtake her.

Basic Moves

Act under Pressure (cool)

When you race against the clock, act while in danger or act to avoid danger, ROLL+COOL

- On a 10+ you do it, no problem.
- On a 7-9 you do it but flinch. The MC will offer you a worse outcome, hard bargain, or ugly choice
- On a 6- you fail to do it. Ask the MC what the repercussions are.

This move is the same in the Sprawl. It's the move that covers situations where the outcome is uncertain but you haven't got a better move to make.

Read the Street (edge)

When you read a charged situation ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ ask up the three listed questions at any time during the scene
- On a 7-9+ ask one listed question
- On a 6- ask one listed question anyway, but be prepared for the worst.

- Where's my best escape route / way in/ way past?
- Where's the profit here?
- Which enemy is the biggest threat?
- What should I be on the lookout for
- How can I avoid trouble/ hide here?
- Who or what is in control here?

This move is a modified mixup from the Sprawl and from Apocalypse World.² It's the move you use to get information. The MC should be generous and truthful with answers. Confident players do interesting things.

² interestingly, Urban Shadow's does not have a basic move dedicated to assessing a sitch, only people

Figure Someone Out (mind)

When you try to figure someone out ROLL+MIND.

- On a 10+ Ask two listed questions
- On a 7-9+ Ask two listed questions, and they get to ask you one.
- On a 6- Ask one listed question, and they get to ask you two.

- └ Who is pulling your strings?
- └ What's your beef with ...?
- └ What are you hoping to get from ...?
- └ How could I get you to ...?
- └ What do you worry might happen?
- └ How could I make you owe me a favour?

This move is a modified version from Urban Shadows.³ The you is directed to the character, but the owner must reply reasonably truthfully. This move can be carried out at range. In that case, the reflected questions might be clues, dna traces, search metadata ect that the player character left behind.

³ in parrallel to read the street, the Sprawl does not have a basic move for reading people. Presumably to keep the chromed up killers from empathy :)

Play Hardball(edge)

When you get in someone's face threatening violence you intend to carry through ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ NPCs do what you want. PCs choose: do what you want, or suffer the established consequences
- On a 7-9 for NPCs, the MC chooses one:
 - └ they attempt to remove you as a threat, but not before suffering the established consequences.
 - └ they do it, but they want revenge. Add them as a Threat.
 - └ they do it, but want real payback. Owe them a FAVOUR.

PCs choose: do what you want, or suffer the established consequences. They get +1 forward to act against you.

- On a 6- it all goes to shit. Look at how much the MC is grinning.

This move is a modified version from the Sprawl. The corporate clocks don't apply here but favours do.

Fast Talk (style)

When you try to convince an NPC to do what you want with promises, lies or bluster ROLL+STYLE. If you call in a favour they owe you before rolling ADD +3 TO ROLL

- On a 10+ NPCs do what you want.
- On a 7-9 NPCS do it but they modify the terms or you owe them a FAVOUR.
- On a 6- they can't. They might tell you why, or maybe you're just interrupted...

This move is a mashup from the Sprawl and Urban Shadows. If you want to persuade a PC, call in a favour or offer one to them. When you call in a favour to get the +3, make sure you explain how you've done that in fiction, whether through explicit appeals to their sense of honour or dark threats about hidden secrets.

Mix it Up (meat)

When you use violence to seize control of an objective, state that objective and ROLL+MEAT

- On a 10+ you achieve your objective.
- On a 7-9 you achieve your objective but choose two.
 - | you leave something behind (MC to detail)
 - | you take harm as established by the fiction
 - | an ally takes harm as established by the fiction
 - | something of value breaks
- On a 6- you don't achieve your objective. Pray the MC offers you a hard bargain.

This move is a modified version from the Sprawl. The objective is very rarely "kill everyone". Those mad-dog types tend not to last in the Peripherals. It might be "recover the drugs packet.", "Impress and terrify the merchant.", "steal the drone", "escape the ambush." or similar. Dealing damage is more of a side effect than the aim. You can't tailor the objective to avoid the consequence of your choice on a 7-9 result.

Suffer Harm

When you suffer harm, (even o-harm or s-harm) then reduce the harm by the level of your armour (if any), fill in the segments on your harm clock equal to the remaining harm and ROLL+HARM TAKEN. Try and get a low result.

- On a 10+ choose 1:

- └─ you're out of action: unconscious, trapped, incoherent or panicked.
- └─ take the full harm of the attack, before it was reduced by armour. If you already did, take +1 harm.
- └─ lose the use of a piece of cyberwear till you can get it repaired (you choose).
- └─ lose a body part (arm, leg, eye).

- On 7-9 the MC will choose 1:

- └─ you lose your footing
- └─ you lose your grip on whatever you are holding
- └─ you lose track of someone or something you're attending to
- └─ someone gets the drop on you

- On a 6- you grit your teeth, but nothing worse happens to you. Yet.

This move is straight from the Sprawl. Note that the dice results are reversed; low is successful and high is complicated.

Favour Moves

These are a specialist form of basic move. Everyone has them, and they are focused on the additional game mechanic for cast-iron favours adopted from Urban Shadows. They won't come up as often as the basic moves, but you'll see them multiple times a session.

Help/Interfere

When you help/interfere with another PC's move in the fiction, ROLL+FAVOURS THEY OWE YOU (to a max of 3+)

- On a 10+ you can add +1 or -2 to their roll as you wish
- On a 7-9 you can add +1 or -2 to their roll as you wish, but you are exposed to complications of their move.

- On a 6- you are ineffectual, distracted or make the situation worse.

This is a original move. You can't stack multiple help/interfere moves.

Do someone a favour.

If you do somebody a favour, they owe you a favour. If it is a big favour (like saving their kid from a burning building), maybe they owe you two. If you are unlikely to see them again, you're unlikely to get the favour back.

Pay back a favour

When you demand someone pays back a favour, remind them why you owe you and:

- Make a PC:
 - do you a favour at moderate cost.
 - help/interfere as you ask
 - answer a question honestly
 - cancel a favour somebody owes them
 - transfer ownership of a favour somebody owes them to you.
- Make an NPC
 - answer a question honestly about their organisation
 - introduce you to a powerful member of their organisation
 - give you a useful and worthy gift without cost
 - give you +3 to fast talk them (see Fast Talk \(style\))
 - cancel a favour somebody owes them
 - transfer ownership of a favour somebody owes them to you.

This is barely modified from Urban Shadows. It's a quite codified approach to commonsense bartering that humans have managed since before fire. Go by the fiction first, and if two players agree a favour between them is paid off, it's paid off. They might even want to keep it so that each owe the other a favour to use on help/interfere rolls.

Put off a debt (style)

When you refuse to pay back a favour you owe when asked, ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ you weasel out of the current situation, but you still owe them a favour
- On a 7-9 weasel out of it for now but you choose one:
 - └ You owe them an additional debt
 - └ It leaks online. Take the +untrustworthy tag until you make it right
 - └ Expect hassle from their organization or contacts
- On a 6- you can't avoid the noose. Honour your debt or the person owed chooses:
 - └ they pick two from the list above
 - └ you loose all debts owed to you

This move is heavily modified from Urban Shadows. Sometimes you can't pay a favour back right now. Sometimes, the 'reasonable' thing they are asking for is more than you want to pay right now. This doesn't get you out of the favour, but it might let you put it off for a bit. And if you end up paying a bit of interest or having to work off a reputation, well, that's for future you to deal with. The only way to get a favour canceled completely is to have someone else get you out of it via Pay back a favour.

Max moves

Like basic moves, these are open to all. They probably won't come up all that often but just in case...

Exchange bodily fluids

When you exchange bodily fluids with an NPC take 1xp.⁴ When you exchange bodily fluids with a PC stare at each other for three seconds, then both say if you are guarded or vulnerable. If you both say guarded, nothing more happens. If you both say vulnerable, take 1Xp each. If one of you says guarded and the other vulnerable, then the guarded one takes 2Xp.

⁴ Yes this means sex, but can also mean giving someone a blood transfusion, crying together or assisting at the birth. The MC is encouraged to create painful complications for a player that tries to farm xp this way whether by claiming they are a orgy specialist sex-bot or by selling their blood and claiming it as a transfusion. Advancing this way is funny the first time, but trying to claim more xp then all the other players combined gets old fast.

Acquire Agricultural Property (meat)

When you hit 0000 on your Harm Clock, ROLL +MEAT

- On a 10+ you survive until the medics arrive
- On a 7-9 you survive at a cost. Pick one:
 - └ substandard treatment (-1 to a stat)

- └ cyberware damage (give one piece of cyberwear a negative tag)
- └ cleaned out. (lose all but one thing you own)
- └ research division (+owned and change to a suitable sprawl playbook)

- On a 6- you bleed out on the street. Sucks.

This is slightly modified, mostly to account for why a Corp would be interested in rebuilding slumscum like you. For the MC, any option is an opportunity to introduce complications. Who treats the character and why? Hook them with contracts, threats, implants, addictions, antidotes or a nice list of favours owed. Nothing is free.

Go under the knife (cred)

When you have new cyberware installed by a street doctor, ROLL+CRED SPENT (max of +2)

- the operation was a success
- The cyberware doesn't work as advertised. choose one ⁵

- └ +damaging: sometimes it hurts like hell and eventually it will do permanent nerve damage
- └ + hardware decay: it works now, but it's just a matter of time
- └ + substandard: it works but not as well as it should
- └ +unreliable: sometimes it doesn't work.

⁵ DESIGNER NOTE. RETURN TO THIS ONCE Negative tags for cyberware are sorted out

- there have been ... complications

This move is just as it is in the Sprawl. Obviously, you're going to need to find a back alley doc, ripper or bonesaw to carry out the operation. Using go under the knife to acquire cyberware is discussed in Cyberware. Fair prices for gear (including cyberwear) are listed in Assets. There's no option for corporate sponsorship because frankly, why would they be interested in you? Come back when you're a pro with a reputation, or at least a Sprawl playbook.

Preparing to play

UNFINISHED. to be fleshed out in more detail.

Step 0: Define the corporations (or import them from your sprawl game)

Step 1: Choose a playbook. Unique playbooks in this case, you're the archetype of your community.

Step 2: Name and describe your character.

Step 3: Assign Stats Step 4: Choose Cyberware Step 5: Choose playbook Moves Step 6: Choose gear Step 7: Build your community

install Sprawl drivers?

If you don't intend for the game world to overlap with your sprawl game you can skip this section.

The game is designed to be compatible, with the sprawl, but really, your ultra-competent leatherclad assassin and Kimmy the Waif move in pretty different worlds. In essence, when you Hit the Streets, you are asking around the Peripherals. When you declare a contact, that contact might be a hot-shot VTOL pilot, but they might be Abraham the Worm, a nobody in Hacker circles, but the guy to go to get a phone unlocked delicately. When your Killer powers down after a brutal rampage, someone has to hose the guts off and check the wires ain't worked loose. Some characters go home to sleep, others need a week in an ambrosia tank. Who's the doc? Welcome to the Peripherals.

There were two inspirations behind this game. I've spent enough time working in development engineering and living in places where a smartphone was easier to come by than clean food to be interested in the lopsided tech of developing slums as reality chases past cyberpunk. Things like the favour-economy, where a cousin in the police makes an arrest record fall down the back of the cabinet but later on mentions his daughter would like to join your English school. The same school being run by a friend who's an accountant by day, but you knew someone who could help get her (perfectly correct) paperwork signed off by a corrupt official. The other inspiration was the design space left by the Sprawl's excellent mission focused structure.

It does what it does with a razor focus, but over time my players were interested in developing their characters non-business interactions with the world. There's also the matter of recurring NPCs in the sprawl game. It can be a fun change in pace

So, the game. If you start with a Sprawl campaign, you've got a lot of the style choices, technologies, social problems ect already agreed. It makes sense for the same mega-corps to be present in the background, but makes much less sense for them to take a personal interest in the game. For that reason, the corporate clocks are not active by default. Stats are the same, and if a player wants to use an established NPC reasonable equipment that we've seen the NPC with should be included. If you want to play a Sprawl character in the periphery, use the "The Pro" playbook. You lose some moves because you're not on a mission, but you keep the stats, some moves, and some corporate interest. You get a hideaway, a mysterious reputation and the the ability to make worlds collide.

Playbooks

Want to crosswire devices and contacts? Try the Breaker

Want to bring mates and muscle? Try the Goon

Want your own little store to own? Try the Trader

Want to be a diploma from the school of life? Try the Prole

Want to confront injustice head on? Try the Outcast

Want to tie different stories together? Try the Veteran

Want to explore the power of a mega-corp? Try the NGOwned

Want to explore relationships without power? Try the Waif

Want to terrify everyone else? Try the Bonesaw

Benny had a hard head, but I still winced as he smashed backwards through the 'ponics grow lights. "End of the month Vix," said Yont, rubbing his knuckles where the implants stretched the skin, "You know that, I know that. So how come you've come up short on your Neighborhood Pride?". I said nothing. I didn't look at Benny where he lay groaning. I studied my fingernails carefully. The enamels needed relaying, but the glitter of contacts and the design of a skull and key still lined up neatly across the fingers. On the shop display screen, a vidclip from the security cameras bubbled up. A face, talking and stretching in the distorted kind of speech the bubbles could produce. I held up a palm. Written across it was "Creds coming. 24 hours. I deliver.". Yont stared at it a few moments, and didn't say anything else. He left Benny where he was. He took the workbench instead. Shit. I let the palm-dispy dissolve back to the rolling gears screen saver and went to rescue Benny and what was left of the 'ponics side-gig. At least that'd be worth a few creds once the stock matured.

Benny's uncle was not happy to see me, but if you can't turn to family in a crisis, what's the point of having a partner? He'd made his money the old fashioned way, he'd inherited it, along with a poky store, a stock of

Breaker

You aren't a hacker. Cyberspace is for tourism, not to live in. But when someone comes to you with a cuffed phone, a tagged handbag or an implant that has locked following warranty expiration, you're the person who gives them back their stuff. For a values of theirs, and a value of gives.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
2	0	0	-1	1	1
1	1	-1	0	2	1
1	-1	0	0	1	2

Start with one chrome, a workshop and everybody at the table owes you a favour.

Breaker's Workshop

You have a workshop. Choose three good tags and one bad one

- Gene sequencer
- quantum decryptor
- boxes of electronics
- crude AI assistant
- environmental isolation systems
- mobile workshop
- micro-manipulators
- fast lane comms access
- | cramped
- | marked
- | unreliable
- | infested

Crack Knuckles

When you get to work on a manufactured object ROLL+MIND

- On a 10+ ask three
 - | What is hidden here?
 - | How can I repair this?
 - | Who's looking for this?
 - | What's a good alternative use for this?
- On a 7-9 ask one
- On a 6- ask one, but you'll damage the object

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something historical, something techno, something weirdly common, something edible

EYES: bloodshot, focused, distant, artificial, hidden

FACE: rash, artificially stable, moody, elongated, passionate, modest

BODY: pale, steely, freckled, lined, dimpled, bright

SKIN: black, tattooed, hard, bright, with large pores, fair

WRAPS: square, light, violent, steady, innocent, painstaking, protruding, red, slovenly, colorful

Latest model brain

When you pitch your services to someone ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ they're impressed and offer you a paid job
- On a 7-9 they're impressed and offer you a job paid in favours
- On a 6- you fluff it. MC's move...

Try this number

If you can't (or won't) deal with something, you probably know who can. Give the customer a number and ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ it's who they need. Both will owe you a favour
- On a 7-9 it's who the customer needs need but choose one:
 - └ they're expensive
 - └ you'll owe them a favour
 - └ they have a grudge against another player
- On a 6- they're dead, missing or worse. Shit!

Red hot networker

When you explore a new area or market for new clients, opportunities or profit MARK XP

How's tricks?

You've got an apprentice/partner/assistant of the opposite sex. At start of session ROLL+MIND for background gigs.

- On a 10+ You are in profit. Take three creds.
- On a 7-9 Take two credit but one of the following
 - └ Corporate Security heat
 - └ Protection money is due
 - └ You've got another player in the shit.
- On a 6- take one credit and the MC will choose one for you.

Chrome

- Finger probes
- Eye scanner
- Comm link
- Lockpick implant
- something
- something
- something
- something

Goon

Society is broken, and you know it. It's a thankless task, but you and your mates are fighting to make a better future, something that is bigger than any one of you. Know what else is bigger than an individual? Your gang. After all, if you are fighting for your little vision of the future, you're going to need to break a few eggs.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
0	0	2	1	1	-1
0	-1	1	2	1	0
-1	1	1	1	2	0

Start with two chrome and a small gang. Answer these questions: "Who had your back when you needed it? Who slept with someone you wanted? Who is the go-to when stuff goes wrong? What marks the edges of your territory?"

Vigilantes

At start of session ROLL + COLL on behalf of your territory.

- On a 10+: It is cool. Someone has got something you might like.
- On a 7-9: Petty trouble. Who did you rough up? Who owes you a favour now?
- On a 6-: Storms coming. Pick two:
 - └ corporate security sweep
 - └ corporate developments want land
 - └ yakuza's moving in
 - └ environmental disaster

Heavies

Your Gang starts at medium sized and has a piece of heavy weaponry.

⁶ When you need to recruit ROLL+MEAT

- On a 10+ you are back up to full strength.
- On a 7-9 you are back up to strength but you owe some favours. Ask the MC.
- On a 6- you are back to strength, but someone's a traitor.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something historical, something backwards, something aspirational, something political

EYES: beady, cautious, hot-headed, polite, large, squinty

FACE: seamed, pointed chin, loose, tattooed, muscular, weak chin

BODY: limp, hourglass, chunky, sleek,

SKIN: dull, baby-soft, tattooed, mottled, creamy, dark

WRAPS: flashy, ferocious, goatee, shaved, painted, tacky

⁶ ADD Xrefs to gang size section and weaponry list

Patch you up

When you perform first aid on an NPC, especially one of your gang, MARK XP. When you perform first aid on a player, they heal 1-3 (your choice), and you MARK XP. Modify favours if the situation calls for it.

Post traumatic enthusiasm

You've got something that stretches your grin. Choose one: fire / grenades / demolitions / orbillery⁷. When indulging ROL+COLL

⁷ orbital weapons. How the hell did you get access to that?

- On a 10+ choose three
- On a 7-9 choose two
- On a 6- choose one:
 - └ the timing is perfect
 - └ the effect is devastating
 - └ the precision is surgical
 - └ you don't stay to watch

Street politics

When you and your gang reinforce your bond through ritual ROLL+MEAT

- On a 10+ take +1 FORWARD for you and your gang
- On a 7-9+ take +1 FORWARD for you OR your gang
- On a 6- there's ideological disagreement. You'll need to have it out now or later (MC to take note)

Chrome

- | | | |
|--------------------|------------------|-----------------|
| • dermal plates | • weapon holdout | • artisan liver |
| • muscle pak | • electoo tats | • limb stump |
| • weapon hardpoint | • RI pieces | • something |

Trader

Capitalism is dead, long live Corpocracy! Buy and trade and exchange favours, old as humanity and as hardwired as that market ticker aug in your left eyeball. Thing is, is the market is a monster. It eats profit and shits out marginal returns and the occasional payoff. Corporations don't like that, it's why the Zaibatsu's declare war on free trade. Well, you ain't about to take that from the Man. You'll buy and sell and provide storage and shipping points, just like your granddaddy cubed did on a junk sailing into Hoi An.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
2	1	1	0	0	-1
1	2	1	0	-1	0
1	1	2	-1	0	0

Start with one chrome, a tradesite and a couple of staff.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something international, something techno, some extinct brand, some cypto-currency

EYES: mild, languid, candid, moody, cool-headed, resigned

FACE: lined, pallid, Greek, flared, chalky

BODY: thin, comfy, pot-bellied, terrifying, luxuriant, bald

SKIN: pale, wrinkled; neckbeard, delicate, supple, clipped, orange

WRAPS: symmetrical, ribbed, professional, knit, savvy, adorable

Tradesite

You're doing ok. Long hours but decent money. Is your site mostly physical or unreal? Pick a main stock and two sidelines. Tell the rest of the table what you stock, it'd be common knowledge and there might be some nice worldbuilding that comes out of it. You Also have a couple of reasonable trustworthy staff. How do they exemplify your stock? One owes you a favour.

- sex
- highs/narco
- Spirits/tranqs
- wholesale data
- cheap foodstuffs
- nostalgic junk like books
- currency transfers
- souvenirs
- live animals, plants
- fashion/cosmetics
- tools/chemicals
- second hand goods
- vehicles
- consumer gadgets, media and medical
- sports equipment
- gamepads
- snacks/drinks/bottled air
- weapons

Know your customer

You have access to various corpo-credit, source'o'wealth and black-listing databases. If someone spends at your store or another player brings you a scan of their card, you can dial the card owner up:

ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ You find something juicy blackmail worthy. Hold one favour over them.
- On a 7-9 There's a pattern or opportunity to pressure them, but the window is closing.
- On a 6- You ain't the first to look them up, and now corpsec want to know why.

Bite me

You owe a loanshark big. Until it is paid off they can hit you up for unlimited favours. This has the advantage of focusing the mind. Start with as many credits as you want and 35 cycles grace.

When you fail a roll you may reroll but strike the total of the new roll from the 35. When your grace hits zero, the debt comes due. You'll need to payback at least twice what you borrowed. You can take another loan out. You can even take a loan to payoff off the first loan. Just don't let the sharks find out.

Always right

When you flatter a major customer or haggle with a supplier ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ you make +three credit. score!
- On a 7-9 you make +one credit. See you again!
- On a 6- you make +three credit, but man are they going to be angry later. Why?

Store security

It's a rough neighbourhood but one little piece of it is yours. When you are in your shop TAKE+1 COOL. In addition, choose one and add it to your shop.

- | | |
|------------------------------|--|
| • pop down weapon turrets | • Logan the cyber mastiff |
| • hotline to corpsec company | • Nagol the ICE manifestation |
| • Logan the security guard | • Everyone, including the regulars, are packing. |

Market niche

When you deal with the corps at high stakes (for you) MARK XP.

Chrome

- Comm link
- Visor
- lie detector
- market feed
- metal detector
- something
- something
- something

Prole

Live to work or work to live? The problem is doing either steady. The gigeconomy favours the multiskilled, and while the meat is weak skillchips are available by the hour. For a fee. Screw that.

You owe two favours and are owed two favours. If you want it, you also have a beat up vehicle.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
2	0	0	1	1	-1
1	0	-1	2	1	0
1	-1	0	1	2	0

Quite a wardrobe

when you impersonate a corp gig you may have conceivably had held in the past, ROLL+STYLE

- Your body language is convincing.
- You'll fool most but there's a telltale. Choose one:
 - You are the wrong sex/weight/race/ for branding
 - RFID tags in the uniform are out of date
 - you can't talk the talk. What are these new TLAs?⁸
- It fails and someone is following you/confronts you

Jacked into all trades

When you want to fix, build and repurpose something tell the MC what you are aiming for. They'll string together one to four of the below with 'and' or perhaps a merciful 'or'. MC says: "Yes, but first..."

- you'll need a workshop
- you'll need this piece of equipment/toolkit
- you'll need help from
- it'll take a lot of testing
- it's going to take time
- you'll need to make ...

Anything major made probably deserves a custom move, and anything that deserves a custom move deserves to be a major bit of work. You can have multiple projects though.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something historical, something techno, something weirdly common, something edible

EYES: fussy, oblong, caustic, persevering, emotionally stable, mean FACE: strong, luminescent, bulbous, black, seamed, translucent

BODY: long fingers, rounded, good, huge, chubby, moustache

SKIN: glowing, musty, flecked, scarred, orange, oily, warm

WRAPS: open-backed, dainty, form-fitting, sensational, pressed, pushup

⁸ Three Letter Acronyms

Clock off

When you hit the bars/gym/whatever to blow off steam ROLL+MEAT

- On a 10+ you wake up at full health holding two favours. (MC to say who)
- On a 7-9 you wake up at full health OR hungover but owed two favours
- It's late, you're hungover and now you owe a favour to ... (MC to say who)

My other life

When you join in something creative/artistic that is bigger than just you ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ It's awesome. Describe what it adds to the area. Whilst there you can reroll a failed roll. You can't reroll a reroll.
- On a 7-9 It's awesome. Describe what it adds to the area.
- On a 6- It's awesome and goes viral. Now money grabbers are keen to cash in.

This is Scooter

When you get another player a gig with you, MARK XP.

When you quit a job in disgust MARK XP.

Chrome

- | | | |
|-------------------------------|---------------------|--------------|
| • Tool implant | • muscle pak | • skillwires |
| • Aug-ieball | • slot chip frame | • something |
| • Productivity drug dispenser | • jack in hardpoint | • something |

Outcast

Everyone in the community is an outsider to the shiny world of the rich and corpocratic, but you and your ilk stand outside the community too. You may end up rich and even powerful, but you will never really be accepted. Don't take this playbook if you aren't comfortable with the consequences.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
0	0	02	1	-1	1
0	-1	1	2	0	1
-1	0	1	1	0	2

Start with a small gang of outcasts and Being the Other.

Being the Other

What thing about you makes corporates and the community nervous? Choose 1:

- built for breeding
- diseased. contagious or not
- member of an untouchable, untrustworthy class ⁹
- taken on a social role that sets you as a person outside society ¹⁰

Watcher

At the start of the session, ROLL+MIND

- On a 10+ you see the coming wave. Say what will change and how that will change the status quo.
- On a 7-9 say how the current status quo is vulnerable
- On a 6- say what there will be shortages of, and if there is likely to be riots.

Small consolations

Outcasts stick together. When you need something, let your gang know and ROLL+COOL

- On a 10+ you get what you need
- On a 7-9 you get a reasonable substitute
- On a 6- you get it, but you owe a couple of favours. MC take note.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something monosyllabic; some waste product; something natural; something emotional

EYES: drooping, brown-eyed, steely, petite, Roman, bisque

FACE: torpid, coherent, pointed chin, languid, raw, proud

BODY: sunken, alive, thick, blue, windblown, sad, small, quick

SKIN: messy, ample, ink-stained, dry, straggly, red

WRAPS: itch-free, collared, fabric-lined, flouncy, fabulous, fabric-lined, ribbed, pragmatic, strapless, double breasted, bloused, innovative

⁹ the originator for this is the Barakumin of Japan, but it can be worked in most cultural settings.

¹⁰ the inspiration for this was actually the village vicar (and witch). A pillar of the community, but not one people feel comfortable around. |

You ain't my cuz

When you call someone out as a hypocrite or poseur roll + meat ¹¹

- On a 10+ they back down, try to appease you or suffer o-harm. Target chooses.
- On a 7-9 they back down in the short term.
- On a 6- the situation escalates

¹¹ this applies to everyone. Assuming you get to a position they hear your voice, you can call out the president. It is not just limited to fellow outcasts.

My people

Your gang is large (+large) and you are good at talking to them.
When you stir them up ROLL+MIND

- On a 10+ choose their emotional state. They'll follow you.
- On a 7-9 choose their emotional state. They'll follow it out.
- On a 6- You fail to impress, are challenged or you are interrupted

No blacks. No dogs. No Irish

¹² When you, as a character, interact with an NPC and you, as a player, beckon at the MC, the interaction will emphasises why you are an Outcast. Take an Xp. ¹³

¹² Designer's note. I am really unsure of this one and its impact on the table. needs testing

¹³ The emphasis may not be overt hostility. It could be ignorant questioning, talking to a different player character despite the Outcast trying to talk to you or simple condescension. It could even be outright support for the Outcast, clumsy or helpful.

Chrome

- | | | |
|-------------------|----------------|-------------|
| • Autodoc implant | • muscle pak | • something |
| • loudhailer | • memory banks | • something |
| • Crypto locker | • something | • something |

Veteran

You are old. Old enough to have fought, before robots and gangers took that job too. You have been in the community a long time, and like anything that sits still long enough here, you play a supporting structural role in how the community works. Some people respect you. Most owe you. All you've got to do it keep it together.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
2	0	0	-1	1	1
1	1	-1	0	2	1
1	-1	0	0	1	2

Start with two chrome, one move, owing two favours and being owed two favours. You get to say who owes you.

Drop someone's name

When you drop the name of someone who owes you a favour, ROLL+COOL

- On a 10+ their name carries weight and opens an opportunity
- On a 7+ you get the opportunity you need, but the favour is spent.
- On a 6- you overstep. Erase the favour and brace yourself.

14

Death Glare

You've seen these kids grow up. When you pull on that string you pin your target in place and make it very difficult for them to lie.

Chess Master

When you go into a situation expecting trouble ROLL+MIND

- On a 10+ the MC will say, or ask, where you can expect trouble from. Take +1 FORWARD to escaping it.
- On a 7-9 the MC will say, or ask, where you can expect trouble from.
- On a 6- the MC will say, or ask, where you can expect trouble from, but leave out a critical detail.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: some extinct animal; something military, some far-away place; some old media;

EYES: wide-set, impulsive, logical, pleasing, calm, rheumy, steely

FACE: polished, velvety, jutting chin, impulsive, inconsiderate, jowly, thick

BODY: slicked down / slicked back, voluptuous, ringlets, flabby, limp, harrowing

SKIN: tanned, dead, dowdy, shaved, thick, straggly,

WRAPS: zippered, stunning, gypsy, banded, translucent, racerback, rugged, stylish, innovative, fitted, state-of-the-art, spiritual ¹⁴ This move is barely modified from Urban Shadows basic move. It is useful anywhere you think that persons name will help you get by. You need to mention they owe you a favour though, and imply you could use that favour against the opposition.

A beautiful ruin

Your battle scars and cybergear go well together. When you have to totally dominate attention ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ you do it.
- On a 7-9 to keep their attention will need showy behaviour too

Fat Old Spider

When you get someone to the point of owing you three favours,
MARK XP

Chrome

- | | | |
|------------------|--------------------|---------------------|
| • Dermal Plates | • Weapon Point | • Dean Man's Switch |
| • Crawler chair | • Aug Scanner | • something |
| • Hydraulic Claw | • Tethered Watcher | • something |

NGOwneD

You looked down from the spire at the heaving heaving jungle and heard a call. Maybe privileged guilt; youthful rebellion or an eye for an opportunity. Anyhow, you're here and you're going to help.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
2	1	0	1	0-1
1	2	0	1	-1	0
1	1	-1	2	0	0

Start with two moves; a corporate sponsor and a small gang of like minded individuals. Name them. Answer these questions: "Who did you study with in college?", "Who did you sleep with?", "Who is an adrenaline junky?"

Bleeding heart

When you deliver valuable supplies to a community ROLL+MEAT

- On a 10+ choose two
- On a 7-9 choose one
 - It makes a real difference
 - It's great PR
 - It will scale well

Family Inc.

More than just sponsorship, you have a direct line to a close relative in a named mega-corp. When you play that card and that corp is openly involved take +1 STYLE IN THAT SITUATION

Fieldwork

When you and your gang s[pilt u], dig down and figure out an entire community ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ choose three
- On a 7-9 choose two
 - You know who are the influencers
 - You know who are the vulnerable
 - You know the pressing secret need
 - You don't feel like you owe the community a favour¹⁵.

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something religious; something emotional; something artistic; something scientific

EYES: translucent, painted, seamed, wolfish, veined, florid

FACE: unpopular, sociable, protruding brow bone, lazy, impulsive, precocious

BODY: slouchy, hot, straight, sleek, blemished, pockmarked, thick, crooked

SKIN: clipped, grimy fingernails, plump, yellow, dead, stubby fingers

WRAPS: fluffy, luxuriant, huge, luxuriant, spiky, ink-stained, tunic length, odor-resistant, sophisticated, oversized, girls', preppy

¹⁵ otherwise you do, and members of the community can play on that sense of guilt to demand a mechanical favour from you

Starving babies

When you and your gang push a fund raising campaign or stunt
ROLL+STYLE

- On a 10+ you craft a story about the community that everyone believes and sympathises with.
- On a 7-9 the story works to raise money, but you embarrasses someone, or create a story that will never die.

Free Advertising

When you and your gang promote your sponsor's interests directly,
MARK XP

Chrome

- | | | |
|--------------------|-----------------|-------------|
| • Empath Glove | • Market Feed | • something |
| • Auto Doc implant | • Finger Probes | • something |
| • Eye scanners | • something | • something |

Waif

Growing up sucks, but so does being a kid. You're relatively powerless, reliant on blunt-nose adults and still finding your way. At least tech is easy.

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
0	2	1	0	1	1
0	1	2	-1	2	1
-1	1	1	0	1	2

Choose two moves, one chrome, one favour owed and one someone owes you. How did you come by that piece of chrome? Why or who installed it in you?

Fast Learner

At the start of the session, say what you've been doing to get by and take a TEMPORARY +1 TO AN APPROPRIATE STAT FOR THE REST OF THE SESSION. It must be a different stat to last session.

Street Rat

When you are out on the street and it kicks off ROLL+EDGE

- On a 10+ hold three
- On a 7-9 hold two. Spend hold one for one to:

	find somewhere to hide
	spot something worth stealing
	realise what somebody wants

Script Kiddie

You're addicted to the net. Pay a credit a week or make other arrangements to keep your fast lane access. As long as you are online you can ask the GM for some random fact related to what you are thinking about.

F.R.I.E.N.D

You have an artificial protector, a guardian machine spirit or a battered toybot. It counts as a piece of chrome, activated by ROLLING+SYNTH where it allows you to do something in the fiction. Choose one:

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something edible; something monosyllabic; some small animal; something gamer

EYES: blunt, moody, cool-headed, jowly, tactful, rheumy

FACE: veined, florid, sharp cheekbones, drooping, bleary, translucent

BODY: bright, harrowing, compact, carved, sturdy, untamed

SKIN: peach, pitted, creamy, glowing, dark, uneven

WRAPS: standard-fit, on trend, latest, stunning, pressed, anatomic, bold, retro, easy-to-maintain, dependable, preppy, high-performance

- Protective: can be used as a +1 Armour
- Hacker: can be used to subvert technology
- Dangerous: can be used as a weapon
- Transformer: choose two from the next set

Choose one:

- Big
- Small
- Incorporeal
- Intimidating

Choose one:

- Jealous
- Slow
- Fragile
- Stolen

Feeling Empty

When you steal something and consume it alone, you can ask the MC what sort of meal any two characters may have shared in the past. Then MARK XP

Chrome

- | | | |
|-----------------------|-------------------|------------------|
| • Cherubim Wings | age | • Poison Spur |
| • Implanted tail/limb | • Pheromone spray | • Climbing Spurs |
| • Neural data stor- | • Cyber ears | |
| | • Courier pouch | • something |

Bonesaw

There's lots of reasons to be a Ripper Doc. Maybe you saved some drunk's life and got off on the thrill. Maybe your aunt instructed you in the secret rituals. Maybe you really like cybergear and you read the instruction manual real carefully. Anyhow, they give you creds to risk their lives. Ain't that cool?

Choose one row.

Style	Edge	Cool	Meat	Synth	Mind
0	2	0	-1	1	1
0	1	-1	0	2	1
-1	1	0	0	1	2

Start with a a piece of chrome, a surgery, another move and being owed two favours.

Bonesaw's Sugery

You have a surgery with an operating theater. Choose three more good tags and one bad one ¹⁶

- Gene sequencer
- Printer and files
- Tattoo sets and a rep
- Ambrosia tanks
- Special stock
- Second special stock
- Deep brain scanner
- Mobile workshop
- └ cramped
- └ unreliable
- └ unlicensed
- └ owned

Flesh is Cheap

Your surgery has access to unlimited protein. You can regrow anyone's anything, as long as it is biological and does not count as chrome. Choose a source:

Offal pipe	Turd pigs	Rag yeast
Roach grinder	Flesh trees	Pigeon loft

Today's Special

At the start of session ROLL+EDGE. On a hit you have in stock a new, one off piece of cyberwear (salvaged, repaired or crafted)

Choose as many as you need:

NAME: something aspirational; something latin; something backwards; something artistic

EYES: pensive, incisive, resigned, courteous, sedate, independent

FACE: rosy, hollow cheeks, tiny, olive, muscular

BODY: weird, plush, lanky, parted, messy, portly

SKIN: bruised, red-rimmed, clear, loose, flawless, tattooed

WRAPS: patchwork, boxy, engineered, on trend, flirty, active, chic, casual, straight, synthetic, constructed of living

¹⁶ Special stock - choose any piece of chrome from the big list in the rulebook. You always have this in stock. Others are harder to source

- On a 10+ pick any from the big list of chrome
- On a 7-9 the GM offers a choice of two.

Potato Head

When a limb or equivalent gets cut off ROLL+SYNTH

- On a 10+ you can control it remotely
- On a 7-9 you can control it, but it will die very soon if not treated.

A Little Rummage

When you work on someone on in your surgery ROLL+MIND

- On a 10+ choose 2
- On a 7-9 choose 1
 - └ Target takes +6 health (including over normal maximum)
 - └ Remove a negative tag from target's cyberwear
 - └ You learn something. MARK XP
 - └ You put something very hard to trace in them (tracker, slow poison, remote bomb, message ect)
- On a 6- there have been ... complications

Chrome

- | | | |
|---------------------|---------------------|--------------------|
| • Finger probes | age | • Auto doc implant |
| • Implanted | • Eye scanner | • Poison Spur |
| tail/limb | • Productivity drug | • something |
| • Neural data stor- | dispenser | • something |

The Pro

You lose some moves because you're not on a mission, but you keep the stats, some moves, and some corporate interest. You get a hide-away, a mysterious reputation and the the ability to make worlds collide.

Cyberware

Cyberware List

Assets

Favours

Cred

Gangs

Contacts

Advancement

The matrix

Running Cyber_Peripherals

agenda

always say

principles

moves

inflicting harm

countdown clocks

corporations

threats

putting it all together

the first session

Designer Notes

Rule 1 - No Exceptions

Rule 2 - Needs to work for a one shot with strangers at a conference

Rule 3 - Evoke, not mimic, the sprawl and cyberpunk

Rule 4 - Support the MC

Rule 5 - Every mechanical part needs to justify its existence

Rule 6 - Every move needs to relate back to theme or the mechanics

Rule 7 - No stat substitution moves

on Playbooks

a) Does this playbook have a niche. Is it overshadowed?

b) Is the playbook fun and coherent?

c) Does the playbook offer levers for the MC to pull?

d) Does the playbook offer a second, different way to play that character?

On Moves

i) Is the trigger only going to trigger when it is important?

ii) does a miss move the story forward with something interesting?

iii) Does a success?

iv)

Formatting:

Only stats use digits. Hold is spent in one or twos not 1 or 2. Add explanation for hold or choice from list under the first option that uses it.

All moves to use the same format of trigger, 10+, 7-9 then 6-

Bibliography

Index

license, 4